

PICTURESQUE SCENES GATHERED FROM SNOW-BOUND PHILADELPHIA, ALASKA AND THE WAR ZONE

IT'S HARD TO KEEP THE CHILDREN IN WHEN THERE'S SNOW UPON THE GROUND. What with sledding, snowball fighting, "sculpturing" snow men and the other methods of amusement which present themselves, the youngsters are making the most of the first snowfall of the winter. At the left is a portion of the endless chain which goes up and down the side of one of the hills in Cobb's Creek Park while the snow lasts; at the right, children in one of Kensington's streets are rolling up one of those balls that delight boyhood.

WHAT A REAL SNOWFALL LOOKS LIKE. This photograph from Alaska, shows an avalanche of snow catapulting down the sides of Mt. MacKinley, the assumed culminating point of the North American continent. Mt. MacKinley is 20,464 feet high, and the fall of snow, in its 10,000 feet descent, created such a suction that trees a mile away were snapped like tinder.

SOCIETY GIRLS DANCE TO AID LITTLE SUFFERERS IN TOKIO HOSPITAL. The feature of the Christmas Bazaar given at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel for the benefit of the Children's Ward of St. Luke's International Hospital, in Tokio, Japan, last night, was the cabaret, at which a number of society's most prominent young women were the gay enticers. Among those in Miss Margot Scull's set were, from left to right, Miss Scull, Miss Harriet Geyelin, Miss Dorothy Disston and Miss Agnes Brockle.

ATLANTIC CITY PASTORS FOLLOW THE EXAMPLE OF THE MEEK AND LOWLY CARPENTER. Photo by Harper Smith. Evangelist Stough will go after the Devil at the seaside resort when the New Year opens. Ministers from the various churches in the city are shown doing real "sky-pilot" work by completing the roof of the revival tabernacle.

GERMANS IN FRANCE MAKE THEMSELVES COMFORTABLE FOR WINTER. German troops are seen in an unconventional attitude during a respite in the campaign in the Artois region. The men are preparing a little party before the evening sets in. Note the "dug-out" which protects the soldiers from bursting shells at the right.
